Spring Practice Media Notes

**Practices will be held on both the football practice fields and in Arizona Stadium, as determined by the coaching staff.

**Practices may be closed to the public and media at the discretion of the head coach. Generally the first 20-30 minutes of practice will be open to the media.

**Media attending open practices must stay in areas marked off for that purpose in the practice facility. In Arizona Stadium, media must stay beyond the perimeter of the playing field.

**Photographers admitted to practice may not use tripods adjacent to the fields during live practice periods, nor circulate around the fields without being accompanied by a member of the ICA Media Relations staff. Photographers and videographers may shoot close-up action only if accompanied by a member of the UA sports information staff.

**No wide-action videography of full-team drills is permitted.

**Players will be available to the media after practices if class or meeting schedules permit.

**Coach Mike Stoops will address the media after each practice. Other coaching staff members also will be available on request.

2003 Arizona Football

New Direction For UA Football

Following its worst season in 47 years, Arizona football took a new direction on Nov. 29, 2003, with the hiring of Oklahoma defensive coordinator Mike Stoops. Over the next months, Stoops assembled an outstanding coaching staff, bringing in coaches with winning backgrounds from a nice sampling of successful programs. Considering the timetable, UA's new staff performed admirably during the recruiting process. The Wildcats head into spring football following a firm off-season emphasis on strength and conditioning – two strength coaches Stoops lured from OU provided the impetus. When asked countless times about his timetable for success, Stoops has said each and every time that his first Arizona team will, above all, expect to win every football game. It's a sparkling and confident attitude, and it has permeated the program. The Wildcats are eager to see how Stoops' national championship background as a coordinator will fare in the Pac-10, a league with nine coaches having less than four years' tenure. He's the new guy on the block, but there aren't many hardened bullies around. One thing his background is sure to restore in Tucson: Arizona will be a tough bunch.

Head Coach Mike Stoops

Arizona athletics director Jim Livengood signed one of the nation's top coaches last November in luring Mike Stoops away from a powerhouse Oklahoma program, where he had worked the past five seasons as a top lieutenant to his brother, Bob Stoops. Livengood had one clear thing in mind: winning football.

In Norman, Mike Stoops helped his brother rebuild the mired OU program (from 5-5-1, 3-8, 4-8 and 5-6 teams in the preceding four years) into an overnight success as a 7-5 bowl team in 1999 -- and a national championship club a year later at 13-0. The pace of that improvement was appealing to Livengood, albeit largely the responsibility of the elder Stoops. After interviewing Mike for the job, it was clear to Livengood that he was no less a man for the task at Arizona than his brother had been when hired from the coordinator ranks by OU.

As it turned out, it's a good thing UA was first in line for Stoops, having released third-year coach John Mackovic in mid-season a year ago. Other jobs opened up later, and Stoops' name was mentioned for all, as in 'Too bad Arizona already hired Stoops.'

Stoops has been involved with three major-college programs in his 18-year coaching career. The common theme: winning. Winning while playing for and learning the coaching trade from Hayden Fry at Iowa, winning while developing his skills and turning around a program under Bill Snyder at Kansas State, and winning while emerging as a hot coaching talent at Oklahoma. In all, the programs were a combined 168-48-3 during Stoops' 18 seasons on those staffs.

Arizona has lost 48 games in the last six seasons and needed a believer. Stoops' public statements are all about competing, and competing to win now, in 2004. Stoops' private messages to his Arizona team bear the same stamp: get used to winning and get about the business of doing so now.

Stoops' penchant for rugged defenses will help heal a program that's been struggling in that area in the 2000s. A year ago the Cats' rang the bell at No. 10 in the Pac-120 in total defense, rushing defense, scoring defense and pass efficiency defense. Most believe that Stoops will accept no substitute for defense, and help recharge a unit that once spawned nationally known nicknames.

Stoops was with Oklahoma for five years as associate head coach, co-defensive coordinator and secondary coach (1999-2003); was defensive coordinator and secondary coach at KSU for three years (1996-98); defensive ends coach at KSU for the three years prior to that (1992-95) and started with two years as a graduate assistant and four years as a volunteer defensive coach at Iowa (1986-91).

Along the way he hit some high points: four bowl games as an Iowa player, capped by 1984 All-America honors as a DB; sixteen bowl games as a coach; working with two Jim Thorpe Award winners, one who also won the Bronco Nagurski Award; making three Rose Bowl trips – once as a player and twice as a coach; AFCA assistant coach of the year finalist; etc.

Defense is his specialty, and at Arizona he's brought in the assistants to keep that emphasis going – but also hired some offensive minds to get Arizona back into the bowl business. His first UA club will feature his younger brother, Mark, coordinating a multiple 3-4 defense well known by the Stoops family, and use a spread offense initiated by offensive coordinator Mike Canales, a known proponent of the passing game.

Clearly, Arizona football in 2004 will mark the entry of a new player in the Pac-10 – Mike Stoops. His enthusiasm and hard-working nature are in evidence, and should become clear to the rest of the league shortly.

Grading the Coaching Hires for the 2004 season:

1. Mike Stoops, Arizona.
(He) was an integral cog in the reshaping of the Oklahoma program the last five years as co-defensive coordinator. How will it play at Arizona? Think Southern California (which) blossomed into a Pac-10 Power... Stoops ... immediately becomes the league's second-best recruiter... Grade: A

Arizona Assistant Coaches

Mark Stoops, Defensive Coordinator, Secondary Coach

Mike Stoops' younger brother, Mark, 36, has been defensive backs coach for the Miami Hurricanes the past three seasons. He also has experience as a co-defensive coordinator at Houston, coaching DBs at Wyoming and South Florida, and five years in the prep coaching ranks. The Miami defense was first in the Big East and 2nd nationally in total defense, and led the nation in pass defense. The Canes were fourth in the nation in scoring defense and finished 11-2 with a No. 5 ranking in both polls after their Orange Bowl victory over Florida State. His 2002 secondary also led the nation in passing defense and pass efficiency defense, and the 2001 group under Stoops helped lead Miami to its fifth national title, intercepting 27 passes for a defensive unit that had 45 takeaways. A three-year letterman as a safety at Iowa, he began his career as a graduate assistant for the Hawkeyes under Hayden Fry. He has been part of nine teams that played in bowls, including Rose Bowls in 1986, 1991 and 2002.

Mike Canales, Offensive Coordinator, Quarterbacks Coach

Canales, 43, comes to Tucson after a year as wide receivers coach with the New York Jets, but has predominantly been a quarterbacks coach and offensive coordinator, notably with tutelage under Lavell Edwards and Norm Chow at Brigham Young and later directing a high-powered passing game at North Carolina State. He lettered three years as a QB at Utah State under Bruce Snyder and Chris Pella, and then started his career as a grad assistant at BYU, including its 11-3 season in 1985 when it was No. 16 in the final polls. He was coordinator and receivers coach for eight years at Snow College, quarterbacks coach at Pacific for a year, offensive coordinator and quarterbacks coach at South Florida (where he worked with Mark Stoops) for five years, then took over passing-game and QB coach duties at North Carolina State in 2001-02. He worked with NCSU record-breaker Phillip Rivers during his sophomore and junior seasons, the last an 11-3 year in which the Wolfpack were No. 12 in the final AP poll. Last year he worked with New York's Santana Moss and Curtis Conway, among others, and Moss finished in the NFL's top 15 in receiving.

Kasey Dunn, Running Backs Coach

Dunn, 34, a former star college player, added some Pac-10 experience to the staff and has coached on both sides of the ball. He will coach running backs for UA. He joined the staff after a year coaching cornerbacks at Texas Christian in 2003 and spent the previous five years on the Washington State staff under Mike Price as running backs coach, special teams coordinator and assistant head coach. He also has three years' experience coaching cornerbacks at New Mexico and Idaho, and a year coaching tight ends and receivers at San Diego. Dunn, a two-time All-American, is the Idaho career record holder for receptions and receiving yardage, ranking No. 3 on the NCAA chart in both categories. He played professionally with the Houston Oilers, B.C. Lions and Edmonton Eskimos for two years after his college days, but returned to Idaho and began his coaching career as a volunteer coach working with receivers in 1993.

Tim Kish, Linebackers Coach

Kish, 49, brings three decades of experience to Stoops' staff, including 14 years coaching in the Big Ten. His view of the game is well rounded. He initially was hired to work with UA's defensive ends but likely will coach linebackers in 2004. He has been a defensive coordinator for the past seven seasons and has coached in eight bowl games. He spent the last two years as defensive coordinator and linebackers coach at Indiana, was defensive coordinator and linebackers coach at Ohio University the year before, and held the same position for three years at Illinois from 1997-2000. He began his career as a high school coach in Ohio in 1976, was a graduate assistant at Bowling Green for two years, coached the secondary at Purdue for a year, coached quarterbacks and the defensive line in two seasons at Ball State, and coached defensive ends and outside linebackers for eight seasons at Army. He spent five seasons coaching ends and linebackers at Northwestern before becoming the coordinator at Illinois.

John Peterson, Centers and Guards Coach

Mike Stoops reached into the Midwest and lured a former Ohio State player out west to coach the interior of the Arizona offensive line. Peterson, 35, came to UA from Miami (Ohio) University, where he spent five years as the offensive line coach and the last three as the Redhawks' running game coordinator. His 2003 line helped spearhead a Miami attack that led the nation with 43 points per game and was second nationally with 501 yards in total offense per game. The Redhawks were 13-1 and defeated Louisville in the GMAC Bowl. A Buckeye lineman from 1988-90, Peterson began his coaching career as a graduate assistant at Cincinnati, then returned to Columbus to serve as a G.A. with the offensive line in 1993-94. At Akron as line coach from 1995 to 1998, Peterson coached his 1997 group to pave the way for the nation's 11th-rated rushing offense, plus the unit allowed only 10 sacks. He is an Ohio prep Hall of Fame player and has participated in six bowl games as a player or coach.

Joe Robinson, Defensive Ends Coach, Special Teams Coordinator

Robinson will coach defensive ends and brings a solid background in coaching special-teams, which he'll coordinate at Arizona. He has been a special teams coordinator or recruiting coordinator for more than a decade and has coached on both sides of the ball. He was coordinator of special teams and linebackers coach at Central Florida in 2003, coaching the nation's leading punter in Matt Prater (47.9), who more importantly helped UCF record a 41.9 net average. He coordinated special teams at Houston in 2002, coached running backs and was recruiting coordinator at Louisiana Tech in 2001, and spent seven seasons with Southern Mississippi from 1992 to 1998. A graduate of Louisiana State, he began his career as a defensive coordinator and prep head coach in Louisiana, then joined Louisiana Tech's staff as a grad assistant in 1989. After two seasons more seasons there coaching the defensive line and serving as recruiting coordinator, he joined the Southern Miss staff. His kick return unit led the nation there in 1997 and posted top 10 ratings in five other categories during his tenure. At Houston, his Cougar unit led Conference USA in net punting after finishing 10th the year before, and field goal kicker Justin Bell was a semi-finalist for the Lou Groza Award.

Arizona Assistant Coaches - 2

Mike Tuiasosopo, Defensive Tackles Coach

UA's new defensive tackles coach bears a name familiar to Pac-10 partisans. Mike Tuiasosopo joins the UA staff after a year coaching defensive tackles at Utah. Tuiasosopo, 40, is a former college player and has been a collegiate defensive line coach for the past eight years after a solid career in the prep ranks. The Utes had an exceptional season in 2003, finishing 10-2 with a Liberty Bowl victory and final No. 21 ranking in the polls. Utah shut out its last two opponents and did not allow a point in its last 10 quarters, plus recorded victories over California and Oregon. Tuiasosopo played four years at Pacific Lutheran, earning all-league honors and helping the club win the national title his junior year. He began his coaching career at Montclair, Calif., Prep, was a graduate assistant at Pacific, coached linebackers at St. Mary's High in Stockton, and was then head coach at Berkeley, Calif., High for three years. He was defensive line coach for John L. Smith at Utah State for three seasons, and coached the line for Chris Tormey at Nevada for three years before joining Urban Meyer's Utah staff last year. His cousin, Manu Tuiasosopo, was a two-time All-American tackle at UCLA and Manu's son, Marques, was a star quarterback at Washington and now with the Oakland Raiders.

Charlie Williams, Wide Receivers Coach

UA's new receivers coach brings experience working with high-caliber players in both the major-college and professional ranks. Williams, 44, came to UA after a year coaching receivers for Lou Holtz at South Carolina. He spent the previous six seasons in the National Football League, coaching receivers for the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, tutoring such standouts as Keyshawn Johnson, Reidel Anthony and Jacquez Green. Johnson played in three pro bowls while Williams was his position coach. Williams was wide receivers coach for the Miami Hurricanes before his NFL stint, the first two under Dennis Erickson and one under Butch Davis. In 1993 and 1994, Williams helped Chris T. Jones lead the Canes with a total of 90 catches for 1,462 yards. Williams coached against Arizona in the 1993 Fiesta Bowl, with Jones snagging six balls for 98 yards. Williams also has previous coaching experience at Minnesota, Texas Christian, New Mexico State and Long Beach City College. He played two years as a defensive back at Colorado State.

Eric Wolford, Offensive Tackles/Tight Ends Coach

Wolford was one of Stoops' first hires, lured from North Texas to coach offensive tackles and tight ends. His former playing days at Kansas State coincided with Stoops' first two years on the KSU staff as defensive ends coach in 1992-93. Wolford was line coach at North Texas for one year, helping the Mean Green earn a third consecutive bowl appearance and finish 9-3 under Darrell Dickey. Two of his charges, center Andy Brewster and guard Nick Zuniga, earned first-team All-Sun Belt honors, and paved the way for tailback Patrick Cobbs, the SBC Offensive Player of the Year. Wolford coached at Houston for three years from 2000-02, coaching tackles and tight ends the first year, the second coaching running backs and special teams and the third working with the defensive line. He coached the offensive line at South Florida from 1996-99, working alongside UA's new defensive coordinator, Mark Stoops. He also has previous experience at Emporia State and began his career as a graduate assistant at his alma mater, Kansas State, where he was a four-year starting guard.

Gene Johnson, Offensive Graduate Assistant

Johnson joins Arizona's staff this year from Klein Forest High School in Houston, where he has been head coach the past four seasons. He was promoted from offensive coordinator to the post and compiled a 37-11 record. A 1992 graduate of Louisiana Tech, Johnson played quarterback there and later for the Arizona Rattlers, and St. Louis and Memphis of the Arena League. He began his career as a graduate assistant at Southern Mississippi in 1994 and 1995. He earned his master's degree at Southern Miss in 1995.

Marcus Bell, Defensive Graduate Assistant

Bell, one of the all-time leading tacklers in the past three decades of Arizona football, will serve as Arizona's defensive graduate assistant. He lettered four years for UA as a middle linebacker from 1996-1999, playing on UA's best-ever squad, the 12-1 team that beat Nebraska in the Holiday Bowl in 1998 when he was named first-team All-Pac-10. His 139 tackles that year led the league and he was UA's leader his final two seasons. He finished with 405 career tackles, No. 5 on UA's chart. Drafted in the fourth round by the Seattle Seahawks, Bell played two seasons. He has been training in Tucson since mid-fall.

Erick Harper, Director of Football Operations

Kansas State '92 – Came to UA after 14 years at Kansas State, where his first seven years there coincided with Mike Stoops tenure as defensive ends coach and co-defensive coordinator... Harper was as assistant athletics director and compliance director with Kansas State from 1996 to 2003.

Dan Berezowitz, Football Recruiting Coordinator

Wisconsin-Whitewater '94 – Fourth year in Arizona program after three years as operations director... Second year as recruiting coordinator... Former operations director at Texas under Mack Brown in 1998-99, also worked as director of North Carolina's football center 1995-1998...

Corey Edmond, Football Strength Coach

North Carolina State '93 – First year... Assistant strength coach at Oklahoma, 1999-2003... N.C. State linebacker who played against UA in 1990 Copper Bowl in Arizona Stadium... Former head strength coach at UT-Chattanooga, 1995-99, also coached DE/LB at UTC from 1993-95...

Mark Hill, Assistant Football Strength Coach

University of Tennessee-Chattanooga '99 – First year... Assistant strength coach at Oklahoma from 2000-2003... Former wide receiver at UT-Chattanooga, earning All-Southern Conference honors in 1998 when he had 53 catches for 683 yards...

Spring and 2004 Arizona Football Notions

Coaching

What will Mike Stoops and the other nine new coaches bring for spring ball? Surely emphasis on new attitude. That's been the theme, along with physical conditioning, for the past three months. Stoops has seen hard work and a positive approach breed success at programs that were down before his arrival, and he's not satisfied to look down the road. He wants improvement and expects it immediately. The staff is loaded with quality coaches from winning programs, plus he brought in new administrative support and football-only strength coaches. The coaching factor gives Arizona a huge boost.

Defense

UA took a coordinator from one of the top defenses in the country and made him the head coach. He then brought in a coach of one of the top secondaries in the country and made him the coordinator. They bring in a new brand of defense – the former's zone blitzes and the latter's (Mark Stoops) Cover 2 goods from Miami, and mix it up. How quickly will UA coaches match personnel with the Multiple 4-3 alignment? They recruited as many defensive linemen as possible for the fall, and started to instill the toughness they were used to at the last stops. All these developments and more will redefine Arizona football in the next nine months. The hard-guy edge to Arizona football so prevalent in the 1980s and 1990s was lost in recent years, and Stoops is eager to bring it back. The place to start is on defense, the Stoops brothers' abiding interest.

Quarterbacking

How will now-tested sophomore Kris Heavner react to a style matching offensive coordinator Mike Canales' background? Heavner's talent and potential was a bright spot in an otherwise dim 2003. Can he fend off junior Nic Costa, sophomore Ryan O'Hara and redshirt freshman Richard Kovalcheck? Will a clean slate start them all evenly in spring ball? One thing UA did well in its 2-10 campaign a year ago was protect the guy. Arizona was second in the Pac-10 only to national champion USC in allowing only 19 sacks. A veteran returning line will should help protect whoever's under center.

The Unknown

UA catches a bit of a break at least early in the 2004 season. No early opponent will know what Arizona looks like. There's miles of tape to watch for styles and techniques the new staff brings – from Oklahoma, the New York Jets, Miami, Utah, Indiana, Central Florida, TCU, BYU, N.C. State, the Tampa Bay Bucs, South Carolina, Louisiana Tech, Utah State, North Texas, Miami of Ohio, Ohio State, Houston, Iowa, Kansas State, Washington State, Purdue, etc. Stoops plans to keep it that way – he's expected to close most practices. The new Cats and their quirks get put on tape, in part, on Sept. 4 when the Cats open at home, but otherwise Arizona's 2004 opponents will have to do their specific game preparations on the fly until Arizona's team complexion becomes a known factor.

Conditioning

An informal poll of UA players turns up the broad consensus that the offseason conditioning regimen begun in January is for real. Really embraced by most, really tough for all. Stoops said he found UA players' endurance was lacking. The eight-week strength and conditioning program is only the introduction to what coaches feel will result in a new team come fall. He brought in Corey Edmond and Mark Hill from the power-enriched program at Oklahoma to see it happen in Tucson.

Recruiting

Arizona football had three recruiting periods in the offseason – signing up some new kids, Stoops' recruiting of a completely new coaching staff, and the beginning of 2005 recruiting. It's the first full changeover on the staff in more than 40 years – no one was retained. The new guys hit the recruiting trail quickly to make up lost time. With a complete cycle for the staff to work in, UA's recruiting prospects are bright. They showed enough in a spare month or so before the February group signed, then stayed immersed in early recruiting preparations enough to ensure that Arizona will be a player in the recruiting game.

Youth Factor

Arizona was able to redshirt the bulk of its 2003 class and most guys had good reviews while apprenticing last year. The new staff will make the determinations this time around. Linebacker Dane Krogstad and tailback Chris Henry are two who figure to get swift evaluations, as should cornerback Wilrey Fontenot and receiver Anthony Johnson. Among others, offensive linemen Peter Graniello, Ismael Garcia and Phil Clark, running back Brent Bolden, and defensive linemen Jason Parker and Lionel Dotson wouldn't be surprises on post-spring depth charts. Too, the staff is eager to welcome its first recruits in the Class of 2004, one that Stoops feels has guys who can play immediately.

Running the Ball

UA calls its style a multiple offense, not dramatically different than what it tried to do in the past several years. The Cats finished in the middle of the Pac-10 in rushing in 2003, thanks largely to junior-to-be Mike Bell and his 920 yards at 5.5 per pop. The Cats were last in the league in passing, and brought in a couple of guys with quality NFL experience (coordinator Mike Canales and receivers coach Charlie Williams) to make a difference. Bell has shown he's a capable back and Stoops says he feels he, Chris Henry and Gilbert Harris are big-time backs. UA needs the position to be a complement to a spread passing attack.

Catching the Ball

Junior Biren Ealy, senior Ricky Williams and sophomore Mike Jefferson can be expected to improve as receivers. They combined for 94 catches a year ago when the team struggled with inexperienced quarterbacking. Each had a 100-yard game and showed they could be a feature guy in a contest. UA should be solid at tight end, with senior Steve Fleming and a couple of returning lettermen backups. Fleming put together a year that could signal some all-conference potential, with 24 grabs, the most since current St. Louis Ram Brandon Manumaleuna had 20 in 1999. Expect this corps to help the passing game.

In the Middle

It's nice that UA's senior center is sometimes called 'Oki' by his mates, considering Stoops' last stop. Keoki Fraser has 29 career starts and along with junior guard Kili Lefotu and senior tackle Chris Johnson should form the nucleus of a solid group. Senior tackle Brandon Phillips comes back after receiving a medical hardship year, junior guard John Abramo made the most of emergency duty toward the end of the year and a couple of other guys like Tanner Bell, John Parada, Peter Graniello, etc., could help give UA a good unit up front.

Can anyone kick it?

Arizona set a school record last year for its fewest field goals in a season – two -- in 11 attempts. UA missed from 25 and in, the 30s, 40s and 50s. It was inexplicable, maybe. Stoops said on signing date – when UA inked another guy who should get a shot at the job – that he certainly could do no worse than his predecessors. Sophomore Nick Folk had a widely successful prep background and won't give up the job, but he'll surely be pushed.

Special Teams

Stoops hired Joe Robinson to coach defensive ends and coordinate special teams. His background with kickers is exemplary, his units blocked kicks, were successful in the return game, and overall showed the kind of free-wheeling abandon special teams requires. Arizona has had mixed success in the past four years and wants to rev this part of the game up again. There are talented athletes who can pull it off, so the assembly and direction will need to come from the coaching staff.

Teamwork

Much was made of Arizona's team chemistry the past two seasons. They're over, and you won't find anyone in the program willing to talk about the past. Conditioning drills in the winter bore evidence that the players have rediscovered what it's like to work out as a team, according to quarterback Nic Costa. Quite refreshing, says he.

Depth Chart

Forget it. Stoops says the most competitive position on the team is at quarterback, where one guy on paper might have appeared to have an edge. Look for a meaningful Arizona football depth chart in August.

Home Time

Arizona's 2004 schedule has the Cats opening with their first four games at home, and seven home contests in all. Hopefully a new trend will develop and the Cats can learn to protect their home field. Until a breakthrough last year against Washington, Arizona Stadium had been the scene of 13 consecutive Pac-10 losses.

Bowl View

This year the first eight games on Arizona's schedule feature opponents who played in the postseason in 2003 – Northern Arizona (Division I-AA playoffs), Utah (Liberty Bowl), Wisconsin (Music City Bowl), Washington State (Holiday Bowl), UCLA (Silicon Valley Classic), Oregon (Sun Bowl), California (Insight Bowl) and Oregon State (Las Vegas). UA adds an eighth postseason team in Southern California (Rose Bowl) later. In 2003 the Cats played both national champions (LSU and USC) among nine bowl teams on the schedule. The NCAA rated the 2003 slate the fifth-toughest in Division I-A based on opponents' winning percentage, behind Alabama, Florida, Notre Dame and Texas A&M. This year could be more of the same.

Injury Factor

Arizona enters spring ball without question marks related to physical health. Junior safety Darrell Brooks had offseason hip surgery but recovered in time for the January-March conditioning program. Offensive linemen Tanner Bell (half the year) and John Parada (missed entire season) with knee injuries, also underwent procedures but participated in strength and conditioning programs. The work for those three could be tempered somewhat in spring practice, but otherwise UA is in good shape.

Strength

It's a recurring theme already – UA's improved strength. Corey Edmond and Mark Hill arrived in January and began an eight-week program in the weight room, the McKale access-tunnel ramp and on the practice field. UA players have been lifting, running, stretching and flexibility training more than ever before. It's not a novel approach and, in fact, UA has long emphasized it. But, no question two football-dedicated coaches have made a difference. Edmond and Hill generally worked with small groups of players so that little missed their radar. Voluntary summer workouts will follow once school is out, and Wildcat players are making plans to be in Tucson. The day Stoops was hired he said, "You don't need talent to work hard," in regard to his plans for strength and conditioning emphasis. He's followed through, and so have the guys. Arizona's team personality has changed.

Junior tackle Carlos Williams was recruited as a tight end, but played as a true freshman on the defensive line. He has 16 career starts... Junior strong safety Lamon Means has 15 starts in his two years, while junior defensive end Copeland Bryan has 13... Junior defensive end Marcus Smith earned honorable mention All-Pac-10 honors despite only starting six games in 2003...

Arizona Football – 2004 Prospectus

Football Positions In Brief

(Players' class references are for 2004)

Quarterbacks

Coach Mike Canales

The Cats return three players who started in 2003 – sophomore Kris Heavner, junior Nic Costa and sophomore Ryan O'Hara. Heavner was thrown in the mix in the second half of UA's fourth game a year ago (at Purdue) and started the rest of the way, becoming one of less than 10 true freshmen around the nation to lead a Division I-A team. The promotion was a shrewd move by former UA coach John Mackovic – who nonetheless lost his job eight days later. Heavner was raw, but talented, and showed it throughout his eight starts. He had a slew of ups and downs. The former included 276-yard and 252-yard passing days against TCU and ASU, but those were part of the latter, too – losses. He threw 15 interceptions. But his final outing – 21-for-32 (.656) against the Sun Devils showed his arm and accuracy can be effective. Costa and O'Hara had moments, too, and with another year of maturation should make the situation highly competitive. Redshirt freshman Richard Kovalcheck is in the wings. Mike Stoops says Arizona has some options here, with Heavner and Kovalcheck offering more prototypical drop-back styles, and Costa and O'Hara bringing athleticism and things that foot speed offer. Mike Canales' background should prove beneficial to each of the candidates. Bottom line: UA will spread the field, and the guy with the quickest grasp of the new offense will be the frontrunner. The receiving corps has experience, and that will help whoever leads the pack.

Running Backs

Coach Kasey Dunn

Arizona made one of its best improvements last year in the running game, but still has a ways to go. Some distraction created by a few individuals should be gone in 2004 along with the principals. Junior Mike Bell has shown he's a capable back, with 920 yards rushing and a 5.5-yard average last year to earn second-team All-Pac-10 honors – the lone Wildcat to earn conference honors. Redshirt freshman Chris Henry is a prep sprint champion whose physical appearance is among the most impressive on the team. Those and junior Chris Harris give Arizona a fine group, according to the head coach. Junior lettermen Gainus Scott returns after a year spoiled by illness and an ineligibility issue. UA brings back Fullback Chris Harris (after a year spent with the UA track team) and redshirt freshman Brent Bolden in the mix, and junior Pedro Limon offers size at fullback. RBs coach Kasey Dunn has five recent years' experience in the Pac-10 and worked some charm with twin 1,000-yard backs at WSU (Kevin Brown and Rich Swinton) in 1998. Bottom line: everyone expects durable Bell and Henry to be explosive keys.

Offensive Line

Coaches John Peterson, Eric Wolford

An Ohio State guy and another coach with knowledge of the Stoops' system give UA outstanding leadership along the front. For a second consecutive year, 2003 saw injury play a role in the unit's consistency, or lack thereof. Better strength and conditioning will foster improvement. And, UA does have experience here, thanks in part to the injury factor that provided live-game apprenticeship for a number of young players over the past two years. Senior tackle Brandon Phillips was afforded an additional year of eligibility via medical hardship appeal, and his return will give UA the intangible of leadership in the ranks. He'll be limited until fall camp after off-season knee surgery, but what he brings above the shoulders can help mold the 2004 Wildcats from the onset of spring. He's a good player, too. Senior center Keoki Fraser has 29 career starts, with senior tackle Chris Johnson and junior guard Kili Lefotu also returning as starters. UA has some young depth at the position and walk-on guard John Abramo improved enough to start four games at right tackle to close the 2003 season. Size is not a problem. Across the front it's your basic 300-pound look. The group did a good job of pass protection with new quarterbacks last year, and helped a running game improve. More improvement can be expected. Newcomers in fall plug in across the line at each spot.

Tight Ends

Coach Eric Wolford

Senior Steve Fleming should be poised for a sterling season. He has the athleticism (former QB recruit) and the good hands to make the position a threat. He was limited in spring a year ago after shoulder surgery, but still went out and took the job quickly in fall camp, then went out and caught 24 passes during the season. Fleming took the major role, while sophomore-to-be Matt Padron and senior Clarence McRae rotated in heavy formations. Arizona also has redshirt freshman Ryan Kilpatrick in the mix, and recruited two freshmen tight ends in the 2004 class. Arizona observers want to see how the tight end figures in its new offense. At Stoops' last stop (OU), the top two tight ends combined for 18 receptions a year ago. At offensive coordinator Mike Canales' last stop (New York Jets), the top two had 54 grabs. Tight ends coach Eric Wolford has a balanced background coaching the full line and the outside positions, and his view will help define the tight end's role in Arizona's new offense.

Wide Receivers

Coach Charlie Williams

Arizona suffered a blow last year with the loss of its top receiver's eligibility just before fall camp and another senior's injury cost him the last four games, but a group of younger players stepped up and did a decent job. Junior-to-be Biren Ealy (42-577), senior Ricky Williams (36-563) and sophomore Mike Jefferson (16-214) had 100-yard games. Stoops told reporters in early March that Ealy had impressed him, and the next thing out of his mouth was that Arizona has the offensive weapons to spread the field. If UA learns how to throw to its backs, things will get even better on the perimeter. Coaches like redshirt freshman Anthony Johnson enough to consider playing him a year ago, and he tested as one of the fastest on the team in January. Sophomore Syndric Steptoe had baptism by fire against Pac-10 secondaries a year ago and should be better. 2002 letterman Juan Valentine returns after a year out of the program. UA signed a couple of players it feels may contribute in the fall. Health and hard work here could go a long way toward defining UA's offensive success in 2004. Coach Charlie Williams has been around some big-time pass receivers in his work over the years and played as a DB in college. His apparent effervescence could help get this group going in a big way. For some guys, he'll be their fourth receivers coach at UA (since 2002).

Linebackers

Coach Tim Kish

The redefinition of this position group in Arizona football will be one key. A year ago Arizona's leading tackler (Clay Hardt) was a safety playing a hybrid rover linebacker post. Coach Tim Kish has been a coordinator for the past seven years and spent more than a decade working in the Big Ten. He knows the drill. Arizona will have a pair of seniors with experience in Pat Howard and Kirk Johnson, a pair of third-year sophomore lettermen in John McKinney and Akin Akinniyi, and a bunch of young guys and newcomers looking to make a difference in a program that no doubt will bear the stamp of defensive – minded Mike and Mark Stoops. Switching to a 4-3 and the zone-conceptual system the Stoops are likely to use will require some swift learning by the players. Everyone's eager to get going. Redshirt freshman Dane Krogstad attracted attention for his style of play in practice a year ago. Mid-year transfer Randy Sims was hand-picked by the UA staff as a potential ready-to-go player. Two-year letterman Sean Jones moves over to one of the linebacker spots after his first two years as a fullback. Mid-year freshman enrollee James Alford switched allegiance from a defensive power in the East to come West. On paper, Howard (98 career hits) and Johnson (110) have the starting backgrounds and experience to win two of the roles. A pair of incoming freshman in the fall bring what Stoops' staff feels are the physical skills and mind set necessary at linebacker. They may not be ready, but they were recruited to play defense the way Stoops demands it be played.

Arizona Football – 2004 Prospectus

Defensive Line Coaches Mike Tuiasosopo, Joe Robinson

A year ago, four projected rotation players on the front line (two starters) ended up not being around when fall camp started. It wasn't the best transition from spring ball to fall camp. In fact, it caused then coordinator Mike Hankwitz to generally scrap his preferred 3-4 defense and try something else. Entering spring 2004 ball, UA line coaches Mike Tuiasosopo (interior) and Joe Robinson (ends) will each work with five scholarship guys. One of the 2003 departures, tackle Brad Brittain, is back after a successful year in junior college. Three-year letterman Carlos Williams and sophomore lettermen Paul Phillip and Clifton Stanford also are back, as is redshirt freshman Cedric Cofer. At one of the ends, junior Marcus Smith earned honorable mention all-league honors and has the potential to be one of UA's best defenders. Junior Copeland Bryan and senior Andre Torrey should contend for the role opposite, and redshirt freshmen Jason Parker and Lionel Dotson are considered good prospects at end. Walk-on Jeremy Willoughby kept working and earned travel status and some playing time at the tackle spots. The new UA staff went out and recruited Brittain, plus four other defensive linemen for UA's 2004 class. If a few of those guys come as advertised, they could play. In the meantime, Tuiasosopo and Robinson will mold Arizona's front line based on results from the winter conditioning program: get stronger and tougher; then focus that growth into attitude. There's plenty of X&O's background on UA's defensive staff, but getting more help from the front line is going to require making it a more rugged bunch.

Secondary Coach Mark Stoops

When Mike Stoops talks about coaching, the secondary gets some emphasis. That's been his gig. That's been his brother's thing, too. A cursory view of 2003 Arizona football, on paper, shows a few things. Pass defense – 112th nationally. Pass efficiency defense – 112th nationally. Total defense – 109th nationally. Scoring defense – 107th nationally. Not all that litany of low ratings stemmed from play in the secondary, but when you give up big plays, your secondary generally isn't doing its job well. Here are some compelling numbers: Arizona gave up 26 passes of 20-30 yards, 8 passes of 30-40 yards, 5 passes of 40-50 yards and 6 passes of 50+ yards. That's about 1,600 yards in big chunks. Lack of run support hurt, too: the Cats gave up 400 more yards on runs of 20 yards or more. You don't have to be an expert to realize 2,000 yards on 57 big plays is unreal. Again, don't blame it on the safeties and corners – but Stoops and Stoops simply won't have it. Junior safeties Darrell Brooks and Lamon Means are UA's best bets to help turn it around. The switch to 4-3 and zone will help, too. Candidates on the corners include senior lettermen Zeonte Sherman and Luis Nunez, mid-year transfer Keil McDonald and redshirt freshmen Wilrey Fontenot and Michael Beach. Senior Tony Wingate and sophs Gary Shepard and Marcus Hollingsworth return to contend against Brooks and Means at the safety spots. Fall recruits come in at each position and will get a shot. In the recent past UA appeared to not believe that hard work and playing as a team could make some difference. Arizona will recruit talented players across the board, but in the meantime the Stoops brothers' belief structure that "you don't need talent to work hard" will pay off. Mike's biggest citation is 2003 Thorpe and Nagurski Awards winner Derrick Strait of Oklahoma – a guy he says was just another DB recruit but one who took to coaching.

Special Teams Coach Joe Robinson

They weren't too special in 2003. Hence UA brought aboard a coach hand-picked for excellence focusing on that aspect of the game at a number of schools – Joe Robinson. Arizona needs to improve its return game, bolster its net punting and kickoff coverage, block some kicks and keep the other guys from blocking any, and reduce penalties and mistakes in the kicking game. Ninety-five percent of the teams in Division I-A were better than Arizona on punt returns and kickoff returns. The Cats had three punts blocked. At all places, special teams jobs are manned by the good players with speed and instincts. Arizona will open up the cupboards and identify the full spectrum from scratch. Job opening: Special Teams. Punter Danny Baugher probably has a sure thing going. He had a good individual figure (42.6) and UA's net punting was modestly decent. Field goal kicking was poor – 2-for-11. Whether it was snapping or missed blocks that created hurries or simply bad kicks doesn't matter – 11 guys didn't do their job. How much time UA can spend on special teams in spring remains to be seen, but expect it as a focal point long before Sept. 4.

The Classroom

Four Arizona underclassmen players earned honorable mention Pac-10 All-Academic status in 2003 – sophomore punter Danny Baugher, sophomore tackle Tanner Bell, sophomore quarterback Nic Costa and redshirt freshman placekicker Nick Folk. Departed senior special teams player Lee Patterson earned second-team honors. Sophomore safety Darrell Brooks was a second-team selection in 2002. Arizona has earned 14 league academic honors in the past three years, plus had two players named to the AFCA Good Works Team for exemplary scholastic achievement and citizenship, plus 2002 senior quarterback Jason Johnson won the Woody Hayes National Scholar Athlete Award.
